FOR OVER A YEAR NOW, Victoria's Eagle Gold Mine Training Coordinator Shayne Heintz has been responsible for coordinating the site-wide training of all department employees. He brings 30-plus years of experience to the position having worked as an equipment operator, supervisor and training consultant on projects across Canada, the U.S., India, China and Africa.

"I really enjoy being part of the Victoria Gold team and part of mine training operations, which is essential to the success of the company and the mine," says Shayne. "I hope to be involved with the Eagle Gold Mine long-term and witness the company and its employees grow and thrive."

Information Technology employee Ryan Paul started with Victoria at the mine last June and appreciates the Yukon's incredible geological potential.

"I appreciate working for Victoria in the Yukon and the opportunities the Eagle Gold Mine provides," says Ryan, who also enjoys the territory's wide-open spaces. "In my role, I help to ensure the company's IT interface works for both employees and clients."

Crusher operator Bo Johns, one of the hundreds of Yukoners At Work hired by Victoria at the Eagle Gold Mine since the start of 2019 and the mine's advancement through construction to operations, takes pride in his work to ensure the Secondary Crusher operates efficiently.

"Since I started with Vitoria at the mine last August, I am really enjoying learning more about the mining industry every day and meeting new people," says Bo.

Fellow Yukoner Josh Skookum is a Little Salmon/Carmacks First Nation citizen. In his role as a Leach Pad Operator, duties include fusing pipe, shoveling, monitoring the system's conveyor belts and essentially, ensuring everything runs smoothly. "I love the work, the people and the camp set up here at the mine," says Josh.

Training and job-readiness are important to Victoria as the company supports its team at the Eagle Gold Mine. Millwright apprentice Nathan Desaulniers works with the Fixed Maintenance crew to repair the crusher and gold recovery plant circuits when required. "I like the variety of tasks that I need to accomplish each day," says Nathan. "Flying into the Mayo Airport as I make my way to site is so beautiful and gets me set for my time at the mine."
