VICTORIA GOLD IS COMMITTED TO HIRING AND TRAINING LOCALLY, to provide rewarding, well-paying jobs for Yukoners. The company attracts individuals excited about working at the Eagle Gold Mine, including Crusher Assistant Stanley Gostel, who started with Victoria at the mine last June.

“As a Crusher Assistant, I run the Secondary Crusher and make sure the Tertiary Crusher components are operating well,” says Stanley, who was born and raised in the territory. “I really like the people I work with. It’s a great crew here at the mine.”

Fellow Yukoner Klint Beattie is an ADR Operator at the mine, who like Stanley, also started working at the Eagle Gold Mine in June.

“I like learning new tasks on the job every day,” says Klint. “To be able to work and then enjoy the Yukon’s incredible wilderness and be out on the land right here at home is really satisfying.”

Mobile Maintenance Planner Ingrid Hiscock is one of the 20 per cent of women employees working on site. In her position, she develops plans for the maintenance of the mine’s mobile equipment and light vehicles including the generators, mobile lighting and heating units and forklifts for example.

“Being part of one of the greatest team environments I’ve ever worked with is the best part of my job,” says Ingrid. “I feel so fortunate to be a part of this exciting venture within the mining industry and am loving getting to work in the vast and beautiful landscape here in the Yukon.”

Murray Sopher is also an ADR Operator; the process that collects the gold from the solution. Murray brings 40 years of mining experience to the Eagle Gold Mine team having started his career at the Faro Mine in the 1980s.

“The challenge of starting a new ADR plant has been very rewarding and I’m very lucky to get to work in the Yukon amidst the territory’s beauty, culture and history,” says Murray.

“Getting to work here at home in the fresh air is great,” says Equipment Operator Nathan Stewart, who in his position drives haul truck loads of ore to the crusher, grades the roads on site and operates bulldozers. “Being a Yukoner At Work here at the Eagle Gold Mine has allowed me to meet new people who I can now call my friends.”
